CHAMPIONS COME TO TOWN.

THE BASEBALL PLAYERS GREETED BY ENTHUSIASTIC FRIENDS.

They Travel in Special Cars and Arrive in Good Condition for Their Game in Washington Park this Afternoon-Each Team Confident of Success-Manager Comiskey Charmed with the Weather.

ITH a rush and a roar the special train from Pittsburg bringing the St. Louis and Detroit teams to play the fifth game of the championship series came into the station at Jersey City at 8.45 o'clock this morning. The train consisted of three sleepers, a dining car and a baggage car, all handsomely decorated. The palace car occupied by the players of the League was distinguished by flaming banners, on which appeared the inscription : "The Detroits, Champions of the League." That of the St. Louis team bore on one side the words: "St. Louis Browns, Champions of the World," and on the other: "Champions of the American Association, 1885, 1886, 1887."

A big crowd of baseball men had gathered in the depot to grasp hands with the visitors, the task of extending Brooklyn's welcome devolving upon President C. H. Byrne, of the Brooklyn Club.

devolving upon President C. H. Byrne, of the Brooklyn Club.

The party numbered about sixty persons, under the guidance of Presidents Chris. Von der Ahe and Frederick K. Stearns, of the St. Louis and Detroit teams, With the St. Louis men were Mrs. Von der Ahe and Chris. Von der Ahe, jr.; William Meday, a prominent merchant of that city; Wilson Soule, of Rochester; Ed. Sheridan, of the St. Louis Republican; Joe Murphy, of the Globe-Demograf, and Mike Lane, of the Post-Despatch. With President Stearns were Manager W. H. Watkins, Vice-President G. M. Vail and wife, Secretary R. H. Leadley, Directors J. L. Edson, C. H. Smith, his wife and daughter and W. J. Dennison, and Detroit Journalists Mattheson, of the Free Press; Tomlinson, of the Tribune, and Baker, of the Journal.

The players and their friends were in the best of spirits, in spite of their long journey.

Their train was a *f flyer" which made no stops. It left Pittaburg at 8.10 o'clock last night, and before the travellers had time to chase sleep from their eyelids the grimy streets of Jersey City came into view.

Both parties spoke confidently of gaining a victory in Brooklyn to-day. The Detroits were glowing with pride over the whitewashing they gave the Browns at Pittaburg yesterday, while the St. Louis men spoke of former triumphs and argued that luck must change.

former triumphs and argued that luck must change.

The series is quite young yet, there being still eleven games to be played. Detroit, however, has won three games to St. Louis's one; and it behooves the Browns to put their shoulders to the wheel and play one of their old-time games. When Manager Comiskey saw the clear sky and the bright sunshine he rubbed his hands and laughed gleefully. "This is a magnificent day for the game," said he, "and our boys will be able to do some grand work in this bracing air." Of course he thought the Browns would come away from Washington Park victorious.

Park victorious.

When all the hand-shaking was over and the precious baggage carefully looked after, the combined party took the ferry for New York.

York.

From Desbrosses street they went in carriages to their respective hotels. The members of the St. Louis team took up their quarters at the Grand Central, while the League players had rooms at the Oriental. The officers of both teams, with the lady and gentlemen guests, went to the Victoria.

For several hours the players remained retired in their apartments, but presently they strolled down into the hotel corridors and proved the centre of attraction for many delighted eyes. The uniform of the Detroits is a black suit, with snow-white caps and stockings. The St. Louis men take their popular name from their brown stockings and the broad stripes of brown on their blue caps.

The Detroits came down from the Oriental in carriages and were joined at the Grand Central by the members and officers of the St. Louis team. The procession passed down Broadway to the Bridge and thence to Washington Park.

-morrow afternoon the sixth game of the world's championship series will be played at the Polo Grounds, and at 11 o'clock Sun-day evening the teams leave for Philadelphia, where they play again Monday.

The scene was inspiring and seemed to infuse new life into the crew of the Scotch yacht, who, naturally enough, have been rather crestfallen since their defeat by the Yankee boys on the Volunteer, and to give them stouter hearts for their long sail across the Atlantic. For the past week they had been preparing the cutter for her voyage. She was stripped of her racing spars, all of which will be shipped to England on the Anchor Line steamer Furnessia. The racing sails have been stowed away between decks.

Anchor Line steamer Furnessia. The racing sails have been stowed away between decks. The Thistle's ocean spars are in place and are very strong. She will not carry much canvas. The mainboom lacks twelve feet of reaching the taffrail, which shows it to be about twenty feet shorter than the racing boom. The present tophamper looks like the rig of a New York lighter, but it is very substantial and will stand a big blow. The cutter's long, black hull looks as rakish as ever, and those on board contemplate with joy rather than dread their voyage.

The crew were up and about very early this morning putting a few extra turns on the ropes and making everything shipshape. At 6.30 Capt. Barr sang out the order to man the anchor capstan, and the clink, clink sounded very musical over the water. The jib was up in stops, the cutter was hove short, and as soon as the anchor was clear of the mud, the jib was broken out and set, and the cutter began to make way. She moved through the water very gracefully. The fore stay sail was then set, and at 6.50 o'clock, when off Stapleton, the mainsail was tan up and, with the best wind over her starboard quarter, she entered upon her long sea voyage in earnest.

The only parting salute was given by Capt. Nelson, who dipped the flag on the Corinthian Yacht Club's house. The captain wanted to fire a gun, but he had no powder. The Scotch steam yacht Mohican did not accompany the Thistle down the bay.

hopes. There was a general impression around that the time had arrived when operators might safely venture to buy a few things that would show a quick profit; and acting on this theory many did get aboard when it was said that the Reading troubles had been adjusted. The disappointment, therefore, was all the deeper this morning when it was found that circumstances had once more placed the bears in full control. The contradictory state.

ments in regard to Reading matters created little surprise, as the Street has become accustomed to hear a dozen versions more or less of the negotiations in progress. This stock was, in fact, better supported than the rest, the redoubtable S. V. White along taking 15,000 shares. In connection with the buying of the Reading a statement was circulated privately to the effect that the Reading assets equalled nearly 50 per cent. of the outstanding stock.

The bears derived their ammunition from an unexpected quarter. No less a person than Chauncey M. Depew, the active head of the Vanderbilt properties, furnished all the material that was necessary to make a first-class bear market. This gentleman, in an interview alleged to have been held in St. Louis, gave utterance to the statements that are positively alarming as to the future of the financial situation. The great real estate boom is referred to more particularly as likely to produce a condition of panic, and the rapid construction of new roads is also looked upon by Mr. Depew as a menace to legitimate interests. To quote his words: "The latter alone will entail a loss of over $100,000,000, which somebody will have to bear."

words: "The latter alone will entail a loss of over $100,000,000, which somebody will have to bear."

When these statements were read the street immediately concluded that the Vanderbilts would surely lighten their load in order to be able to come in later at lower prices. Result—A heavy and depressed condition of things during the greater part of the day. Scarcely any stock yielded less than 1 and a number of shares dropped 2 a 3 points. A good deal of long stock came out, and during the greater part of the day the Stock Exchange was a veritable bear garden. Easy money and large railway earnings made no difference to the traders, who sold right and left.

The steamer Trave, from Europe, brought $1,136,950 French, German and English gold. The total imports of gold since July 23, amount to about $22,500,000.

The imports of dry goods at the port of New York for the week were $1,775,205, and the amount marketed, $2,046,107.

The Board of Trustees of the American Cotton Oil Trust have accepted the resignation of John V. Lewis as Trustee and President, and changes in the Board are now in progress which will give the large certificate holders in New York for presentation.

Burning of the Sprague Mills.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Oct. 14.-The large Sprague five-story stone mill, 1,000 by 90 feet, at Baltic, Conn., was totally wrecked by fire to-day. The fire was discovered by the watchman at 2.30 a. M. in the card-room, on the third floor, but the cause is unknown.

It was built in 1857 by Amasa and William Sprague, and was latterly operated on a lease by H. L. Aldrich & Co., Providence parties, making cotton cloth. Over nine hundred hands are thrown out of employment. The oss is estimated at $1,500,000. The gas works in the rear of the mill are also destroyed.

Later in the day it was announced that President Glackin, of "Big Six," had received another request from the Typothetae for a conference. At the latest accounts Mr. Glackin and the Strike Committee were discussing the letter, and it was thought probable that the request would be granted.

and it was thought probable that the request would be granted.

The strikers, and the pressmen and stereotypers who have joined them, gathered early this morning in and around Pythagoras Hall to the number of a thousand or more. All were sanguine of ultimate success.

The utmost vigilance is used by the pickets and committees to capture the non-union types who are arriving on every train from all parts of the country in search of "fat sits." When captured, the strangers are taken to Pythagoras Hall, where matters are explained to them, their immediate wants are supplied, and if possible, they are persuaded to return whence they came, the strikers paying expenses. It is a pleasant excursion and picnic for the migratory "comps" who traverse the land over just for the fun of the thing and to see the sights.

Mr. Pasko said that there was no gate money to be had and gave them letters to the heads of a large printing house instead. They went away smiling.

It is said that the reason why Mr. De Baun's men did not quit work was that the four non-union men employed by him joined the union last Sunday.

FOR ATTACKING MRS. CLEVELAND.

Minneapolis Editor Burned in Effigy by an Excited Mob-The Obnoxious Editorial. St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 14.—The manager of the Minneapolis Tribune was burned in effigy last night by an excited mob on account of an editorial published in that paper attacking Mrs. Cleveland. His name is A. J. Blethen.

This is the editorial objected to: And it is extremely hard to respect either per of this family now touring for votes. Cleveland is a handsome, mature woman, apparently several years older than she is said to be. At least she was old enough to have exercised her own free choice in marrying Grover Cleveland. It is incanceivable that she should have married him except to obtain the position of mistress of the White House. Such a marriage would never have been thought of but for the astonishing political accidents which, in the course of two or three years, brought Mr. Cleveland out of the obscurity, which is his proper element, to the highest position in the nation. It is hard to have respect for a woman who would sell herself to so gross and repulsive a man as grover Cleveland, and one with a private record so maiodorous for the bauble of a brief social ascendancy. She is now an object of curlosity and remark for gaping crowds, and her photographs are sold almost, if not quite, as freely as Mrs. Langry's. Such is her reward. If she can secure a re-election for Grover she will have four years more of the gratification which the highest social prominence gives, and of the delight of unflagging newspaper notoriety. After that she will simply have to put up with being the wife of as insignificant and obscure a man as an ex-President could possibly be. One cannot help a pang of sympathy for her, but she has chosen her lot deliberately. Cleveland is a handsome, mature woman, apparently several years older than she is said to be.

HAHN'S NECK SAVED.

The Jury Says He is Not Guilty of Murdering Jack Hussey.

the trial of Policeman Edward Hahn for the murder of Capt. Jack Hussey, in Part II. of the Court of General Sessions this morning. His kindly, genial eye gave courage to the young man whose fate was being put in the hands of the twelve men in the box, who had listened so attentively to the evidence given during the four

The sixth day of the trial was beginning, a white waistcoat, a new silk hat and a freshly shaved and combed, listened to the consequent on the strain on his nervous system during the trial. His eyes never left Judge Cowing's face, and every juror was as attentive as he.

These sixteen men, the principals in this drama which began in a tragedy en June 2 and might end in a tragedy, supeared to be sympathetically impressed with the solemnity of their various parts.

Judge Cowing begun his charge at 11.05 o'clock, and in the course of his charge these points were touched:

Edward Hahn is on trial for murder in the first.

points were touched:

Edward Hahn is on trial for murder in the first degree, and it is a matter of great importance to the State, and of vital importance to him. This man was a policeman, but he must be shown no partiality because he was a policeman; he must be treated as a citizen on trial for the same crime. If the wound caused the death, though the person wounded was imprudent and might have recovered had he been more careful, it is still murder. If the wound was not fatal, but was the cause of or hastened the death of John Hussey, then it is murder. For the law says that a man is entitled to every hour of his life.

If the killing was done with a deadly weapon in the heat of passion, but unintentionally, then your verdict must be murder in the second degree. The defendant says he was hit with a missile. You must determine if that was enough to rouse the beat of passion.

In conclusion, don't stide your conscience, but try to come to a conclusion. I say this as well for the defendant as for the people. Do not throw the expense of another trial by a disagreement back upon the people.

The evidence of Dr. Scholer and O'Hanlon shows that they traced the death to the abscess, the abscess to the wound, and I ask you if there is any evidence controverting this? Two dectors have sworn positively to the death of John Hussey, but if you find that John Hussey died from other causes, then acquit. So much for the first defense. Now we turn to the main defense—justifiable homicidd. It does not gain force by any attitute. Every man has a right to defend himself. When committed in the lawful defense of the slayer, when apprehensive of a design of the slain to commit a felony, or to do some great personal injury to the slayer, and there is apparent immediate danger that such design will be accomplished, he may kill. He must decide, however, at his peril. It is not enough that the party believed himself in danger, but the facts and circumstances must be taken into consideration by the jury and they must decide whether there was reasonable ground for the belief in the imminence of this danger.

The defendant must exhaust every means of danger.

The defendant must exhaust every means of escape. There must be an apparent necessity for saying.

At the request of Mr. Howe, Judge Cowing charged that "where to fiee would be more dangerous than to stand, a man must stand his ground and defend himself."

Other points were emphasized at Mr. Howe's request, and the case was given to the jury at 12.40 and they retired.

The jury were out just one hour when there was a rustle in the Court-room, and preparations were made for their reception. Hahn was brought in from the prisoners' box, and he figeted nervously with his hands and his eyes were cast upon the floor until the jury-roll was called, then his eyes sought and remained on the ceiling.

His face was pale and there was fright in his countenance.

Foreman Carpenter responded to the usual question that the jury had agreed upon a verdict, and added, "It is not guilty."

The jury was discharged and friends of Hahn grasped his hand in congratulation. A young woman rushed up to him and, throwing her arms about his neck, rained kisses on his face. He walked sut of court between two young women and surrounded by his friends.

The jury had but three ballots. On the first there were nine votes for acquittal, two for manslaughter in the first and one for manslaughter in the second degree. The second ballot one voted for conviction and the third ballot was unanimous.

Hahn will not be taken back to duty on the Hahn will not be taken back to duty on the police force until Supt. Murray receives an official report of his acquittal and a copy of the papers. Then he will be tried by the Police Commissioners for being off post and drunk and dismissed from the force. His acquittal grieved the police officials.

"The evidence showed," said one, "that he was more agile than Hussey, had from fifteen to twenty feet start of him, and could have avoided shooting if he had eared to."

SHOT DEAD BY HIS RIVAL.

MURDER IN A LUMBER CAMP IN A CON-NECTICUT TOWN.

Phillip Fay Empties Both Barrels of a Shot Gun at Julius Manblan—The Second Shot Takes Effect-The Neighborhood Aroused and Searching Parties Organized - Far [SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 14.-The residents of the town of Westchester, which is about fifteen miles from this city, were greatly excited last night when the fact became known that a murder had been committed in that quiet village. The facts in the case, as related to THE EVENING WORLD'S representatives by an officer who was in this city to-day in search of the murderer, were as follows : Nearly a year ago a party of ten Frenchmen came to the town, built a log cabin in the woods, and have since been engaged in clearing the forest and burning the wood into charcoal for Barnum, Richardson & Co., of Salisbury. The boss of this gang is named Maublan, who has an only daughter, Mary, a good looking young only daughter, Mary, a good looking young woman of twenty years, who attended to the household duties. A member of this band of wood choppers was Julius Maublan, a young man of twenty-four and a cousin of Mary's. During the time when he was not engaged in chopping wood he was making love to his pretty cousin, and, it is said, the couple were engaged to be married.

About a mile from the wood-chopper's cabin is the residence of J. F. Loomis, who has an Italian at work for him named Phillip Fay, a man of thirty-five years. Fay, as the report goes, was smitten with the charms of the pretty Mary and asked her to become his wife. Then it was that he discovered that his successful rival was the girl's cousin Julius, whom he swore to have vengeance upon.

Julius, whom he swore to have vengeance upon.

Last night Fay took his double-barrel shotgun and started for the woodchopper's cabin.

Several of the Frenchmen, including Julius, were inside. He was received cordially, and the whole party indulged quite freely in cider. Suddenly Fay grasped his gun, aimed at Julius and fired. The shot missed its mark. Fay then stepped outside, loaded the empty barrel and again fired. This time the shot grazed his intended victim's cheek. Some of the Frenchmen then attempted to interfere, when Fay told them he would shoot the first man that moved, as he had reserved the charge in the other barrel for that purpose. He then loaded the empty barrel a second time, took deliberate aim and shot Julius through the

deliberate aim and shot Julius through the heart.

Just as the fatal shot was fired the girl's father entered the cabin and grappled with the murderer. He secured the gun, but Fayescaped. The murderer went to his room in Locmis's house, packed his goods, and fied to the woods. The residents of the place were at once aroused, armed themselves, and the search for the murderer was continued through the night.

This morning Deputy Sheriff Jackson, of Colchester, boarded the train at Turnerville, first telling the conductor of the murder and asking that the train be stopped if anything of the murderer was discovered, as it was thought he might be near the track and attempt to board some slow running freight train. A sharp lookout was kept by the engineer, anh when the train was within about two miles of Willimantic the murderer was discovered walking upon the track.

Upon reaching him the train was stopped and Deputy Jackson and Conductor Clark jumped off and succeed in arresting him. He at first denied all knowledge of the affair, but finally confessed. He was taken to Colchester and was placed in the lockup of that village, with a strong body of men to guard it, where he will be given a trial to-morrow morning.
